The Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1966(29 of 1966)

172.

Statement of Objects and Reasons. - With the increase in quantum of goods traffic on the Railways, the incidence of thefts and pilferage's has been going up. This will be evident from the fact that the claims bill which was Rs. 29 millions in 1953-54 rose to Rs. 42 millions in 1963-64. The amendment in the Indian Railways Act, 1961 has further cast greater responsibilities on Railways who have now to pay claims for losses, destruction, damages or deterioration or undelivered goods tendered for despatch, unless it is proved that such losses, etc., are due to an act of God. This additional responsibility, therefore, now demands that more effective steps need be taken to prevent heavy losses on the Railways and thereby to reduce the claims bill.² At present, offences against Railway Property are being dealt with under Railway Stores (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1955, but this Act has been found, by experience, to be ineffective in tackling with the enormity of the problems of theft and pilferage's on Railways. As it is, this Act makes unlawful possession of Railway Stores an offence, but it is only applicable to unlawful possession of Railway Property owned by the Railways, and does not cover the offences relating to goods and parcels entrusted to Railways for transport.³ Further, the offences under this Act are investigated and enquired into by local police in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. It has been observed that the two Agencies, i.e., the Government Railway Police and Railway Protection Force, which are at present provided to deal with crimes on Railways find themselves handicapped, for different reasons, in effectively dealing with the problem of theft and pilferage of Railway Property. The Railways are spread out over a large part of the country and property, etc., entrusted to them is carried from one part to another usually crossing boundaries of different States. The jurisdiction of State Police being restricted to the State boundary only, it becomes difficult at times for the Police to make thorough and fruitful investigation into offences relating to Railway Property. Besides, investigation of cases in respect of Railway Property also requires a specialised knowledge of Railway working. The Railway Protection Force, on the other hand, are not at present equipped with requisite powers of investigation and prosecution, with the result that whatever action they take in respect of prevention, etc., is taken just in aid of the State Police who conduct investigation and prosecution, etc. Due to this fact of two agencies being responsible for achieving the same object, the machinery has not proved as effective as it ought to have.⁴ It is, therefore, proposed to replace the Railway Stores (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1955 by a more comprehensive Act so as to bring within its ambit the unlawful possession of goods entrusted to the Railways as common carriers and to make the punishment for such offences more deterrent. It is also proposed to invest powers of investigation and prosecution of offences relating to Railway Property in the Railway Protection Force in the same manner as in the Excise and Customs. An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to unlawful possession of Railway Property. Be it enacted by Parliament in the Seventeenth Year of the Republic of India as follows:
